There is probably no city in the world that bas so many objects of interest in its immediate viciulty as Naples. Foremost smong these are the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneam, destroyed by to rank by their arrangement, the same as in the different eruptions of Vasuvius nearly two thouand years since. Through the chaus of the dark ages their identity was completely lost, and it 80 that in case of accident the buildings goold was by mere accident that they were discovered after the lapse of ages. Owing to the hardness entrances for the admission of the wild bessts of the material which has now become solid tufn rock, very few excavations have been made in the former city in the latter about one fourth of | theatre would accommodate 15,000 persons. its area has been completely exhumed. It was in 1748 a countrymen was sinking painted chamber filled with statuary and other objects of the fine arts. Some preliminary investigations were made, when it was discovered to be the excient city of Pompeil: But the gov erament was too poor and feable to continue the explorations. At the time it was conquered by Napoleon and under that accomplished General and King Murat, more was accomplished during nixteen years, than was done before and ever since. Bill, even now a little headway is being made by the present King, sided occasionally by subscriptions from private individuals. I west to the place where the men were at work, or at least had been at work, for they were sitting and lying around in the shade of trees-some asleep and others appeared to be awake. The depth of the earth where they were working was senthirty feet. They had just excavated around i private dwelling house, and singular as it may appear, the roof had not fellen in at the time of the destruction. I tried to persuade the soldier who was on guard in this locality, to let me pass down to it, but he refused. The government has not only soldiers to watch every portion of Pompell, but the workmen in their excavations, or account of the tressures and other valuables that ers found.

The railroad from Naples to Castellamare has a branch that runs to Noscera. On this road there is a station at Pompeii, from which a few minutes walk through gardens and vineyards, the traveller finds himself in the deserted streets of this ancient city. No one can tell until he sion. Nothing but a peculiar system, founded one's feelings to tread these silent streets to see | could have enabled the Professor to impart to their names at the corners, the deep worn ruts of | his pupils instructions which proved so efficient the carriage wheels, the curbed side-walks, the small reservoirs at the fountains worn by the opes by which the domestics drew up the water: and to reflect that nearly two thousand years ago these same structs were filled with a multitude of people, all seimated with hopes, uspirations and desires, like ourselves, -all pursuing the same objects and like us dreaming that death was far off, when suddenly they were overwhelmed by it in its most appalling form; and wenty centuries have nearly passed away and everything is found just as it was left at the moment of its destruction. Here was a soldier found with his armor on and his weapons by his side ... there a workman at his beach-here the graceful belle in her boudoir and her various articles of toilet near her. Here were some that tried to escape with their gold. for it was found in their excleton hands, and there were others that manfully waited the event hoping the flery tempest would pass over them and others again were found prostrate hefore their household gods, believing that they had the powe

History informs us that the city of Pompei Christian Era. It is spoken of by Diodorus, Strabo, Saneca, and Plutarch. Seneca in his tim called it "a celebrated city." From its founder. it passed to the Oscane, then to the Etruscans ben to the Saranites, and lastly to the Romans At the time of its destruction it was a Roman wlony.

The aucient walls of the city discovered already, are about two miles in length. They ere of the most substantial kind, having a double parapet which gives them great solidity and strength. The outer wall is 25 feet high, and the inner from 30 to 40 ft., varying according to the nequalities of the ground. The width between the two is some 14 ft., sufficient to allow three war chariots to pass abreast. In these two miles of wall there are at distances the same as in the walls of Rome, 12 square towers several stories high. These towers not only gave great strength to the walls in time of war, but would answer as observatories to watch the approach of armics who were enemies. The masonry is rude but substantial. It consists of large blocks of lava rocks in horizontal courses, in the Pelasgic style of military architecture. Enough of the city has been excavated to show its public and many of its private buildings-to determine the number, direction, and even names of the streets, so that maps have been made of it with as much accuracy as those of modern cities. Even the numbers, and in many instauces the names of the owners and occupants of the buildlogs, with their occupations, were pointed out to me. They varied very little from the custom, in this respect, at the present day in many parts of Europe. In Naples the barbers have a queer sign, it is that of a bureau arm painted on the side of the shop with 3 or 4 streams of blood issuing from different parts of it, which go up and fail in a fine curve. This would be more appropriate for the bankers to have on their doors, for a more unecrupulous set of cut-throats I have never found than those who have monopolized the business of exchanges in Italy. In Pompell one of the signs of a schoolmaster is that of himself pictured flogging a boy. Urchine would comprehend this, probably, quicker than adults. But the space of a letter will not permit me to go into particulars. I can merely allude to some of the most noticable things discovered i this city of the dead. The buildings themselves and descried streets as one wanders through them, tell their own history—full as much so and more than the burnt district of New York, en by the latter in a recent law suit. without seeing the other. In speaking of this collection as illustration be babits and character of this people, the seem must be considered as the most interesting in the world. For here we find the furniture the oreaments, the gods, the statues, the busts, the utenula, the paintings of a great people, whose city was overthrown and buried under thick sabse almost 2000 years ugo ; their books, their action of the fire, are to be seen. Frafessor Deuchar. Messes. Editors :- Having had the pleasur i witnessing the performance of Prof. Decebar's pupils on Friday last, in Treat's Hall, and having seen no notice of it in your paper, . I feel it ue to Mr. Deuchar's professional talent to state that I have never before witnessed a similar exhibition, giving more general pleasure to parents and visitors. The Hell was graced by a large essemblage of the youth and beauty of our city, who mingled in the merry dence, after the dance ing exercises of the punils were gone through -The manner in which the pupils acquitted themelves in all the popular dances of the day, and in the various other evolutions calculated to add o grace, continces me that Mr. Dancher reasons s all the elements essential to make him a perect meater of his art. The performance of these hildren has convinced me that there is a science of motion which delights the heart, as well as the science of music or poetry. Discordant sounds and unskillful measures can never give pleasure to persons of taste and education : neither can agility of limb, unaccompanied by the "poetry of metion."

The object of dancing is to move with ease, grace and dignity. That Mr. Deuchar's pupils have attained this object, was fully attested by their wonderful performance on the above occahas had the experience, what a shock it gives to upon the true science of anatomical movement A person may dance with much dexterity, and at the same time be very deficient in many ele ments teachtial to a teacher of dancing. Our city was visited, early yesterday morning with one of the asycrest thunder atorms we ever, son's lois) at 33cts. remember to have seen. There had been one or two showers, attended with thunder and lightning dozing the night; but the son rose clear, with the promise of a fair day. Between 6 and 7 o'clock, however, the storm came up in all its wrath and magnificence and for two hours, the rain descended, the wind blew, the lightning the seller. finised and the thunder regret, with scarce a startlingly vivid flash of lightning was followed instantly, by a terrific crash of thunder, and this again, almost without a minute's pause, by the fire bells of the city ringing a load slarm. The Firemen turned out promptly at the summons, in spite of the driving tempest, but fortunately their services were not needed. The lightning had struck the machine shop of Messra Talbor well when he found he had penetrated into a those are seen in public buildings after long use, and Reave, West Water Street, and sat tire to some shavings—but the flames were spendily estinguished without damage to the building.

The force of the wind prostrated trees, fence and chimneys, in various parts of the city. One of the chimneys on the American House block was blown down, breaking through the roof and two on Birchard's Blocks without doing any damage. A portion of the battlement and chimney in the Law Buildings were blowt over, and went crushing thro the roof of the next building East, owned by J. B. Cross damaging it to the extent of $200. In severa of the Lumber Yards the plank were whirled about by the wind and carried into the rive The chimney on the rear part of Dr. Wolcorr sidence, was struck by the lightning anknocked into "amithereens," On Jackso: Street, near Huron, a hundred feet or more e plank sidewalk was neatly ripped up and car ried bodily across the street. Two small fram houses on Spring Street were turned completel round. Any quantity of window lights were blown in by the violence of the tornado. The streats, or pecially those having a considerable declivity, resembled mountain torents. After the storm subsided, and throughout the day, if 3 air continued hot and sultry and the clouds : nightfall seemed to promise another storm.

The Wheat Crop in Southern Illinois-The Old and New Crops. The Alton correspondent of the St. Louis The Atton correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, writing on Friday last says;
The harvest is now progressing finely, and hands are wanted in every direction, and wages are up to two dollars per day. A farmer of Greece County says he never saw finet heavier wheat in his life, on a general average, than is to be seen this year all through Greene and Jefferson Counties. The wheat fields on "timber farms" n these counties are fully rips and ready for the capers, but the wheat on the prairies is a week However out on the prairies of Madison and Macoupin counties the resping machines are laying low the guiden grains this morning at a rap-whoat "came down" yesterday with a rush to 1.50 in our streets. Some snay loads of granary acrapings were sold at that very much to the di satisfaction of one old farmer who had refused $2 for the same two months ago, and delivered at his barn door, in place of hauling twenty-five miles.

A farmer living eight miles in the interior, brught in a load of fine yellow corn in the ear yesterday, stood about in the atrects all day, was offered fifty cents per bushels—refused it, asking sixty, and at night drove home with it. Several loads of corn sold at fifty cents per bushel within two days past.

Have just heard of a contract for new wheat—the first of the season—fifteen bundred bushels of choice, delivered in fifteen days hence, at $1.50. This is nearly a starter, the opinion prevailing that prices will be less than that, three months hence. twenty-five miles.

There is probably no city in the world that bas so many objects of interest in its immediate vicinity, as Naples, Foremost among these are the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneam, destroyed by different emptions of Vasuvius nearly two thousend years since. Through the chaos of the dark ages their identity was completely lost, and i was by mere accident that they were discovered after the lapse of ages. Owing to the hardonic of the material which has now become solid tufs rock, very few excavations have been made in the former city-in the latter about one fourth of its urea has been completely exhumed. It was in 1748 a countryman was cinking a well when he found he had penetrated into a pointed chamber filled with statuary and other objects of the fine arts. Some preliminary investigations were made, when it was discovered to be the excient city of Pompeil: Hut the goverament was too poor and feable to continue the explorations. At the time it was conquered by Napoleon and under that accomplished General and King Murat, more was accomplished during sixteen years, than was done before and ever since. Btill, even now a little headway is being made by the present King, sided occasionally by subscriptions from private individuals. I want to the place where the men were at work, or at least had been at work, for they were sitting and lying around in the shade of trees. some saleer and others appeared to be awake. The depth of the earth where they were working was some thirty feet. They had just excavated around a private dwelling house, and singular as it may appear, the roof had not fellen in at the time of who was on guard in this locality, to let me pass down to it. but he refused. The government has not only soldiers to watch every portion of Pompell, but the workmen in their excavations, on account of the treasures and other valuables that tound.

The railroad from Nanles to Castellamave hus a branch that runs to Noscers. On this road there is a station at Pompeii, from which a few minutes walk through gardens and vineyards, the traveller fands himself in the deserted streets of this ancient city. No one can tell until he one's feelings to tread these silent streets to see their names at the corners, the deep worn ruts of the carriage wheels, the curbed side-walks, the small reservoirs at the fountsing worn by the ropes by which the domestics drew up the water; and to reflect that nearly two thousand years ago these same streets were filled with a multi tude of people, all asimated with hopes, sapirations and desires, like ourselves,-all pursuing the same objects and like us dreaming that death was far off, when suddenly they were over whelmed by it in its most appalling form ; and lwesty centuries have nearly passed away and overything is found just as it was left at the mo neut of its destruction. Here was a soldier found with his armor on and his weapons by his sidethere a workman at his beach-here the graceful belle in her boudoir and her various articles o coilet near her. Here the miller at his post, the landford behind his bar, the cook in her kitches the perents with their children, and there th lover with his betrothed in the last affectionat embrace, with upraised arms to shield her from the death that so soon came unbidden. Here were some that tried to escape with their gold for it was found in their skeleton hands, and there were others that manfully waited the even hoping the flery tempest would pass over them and others again were found prostrate before their household gods, believing that they had the powe Many of these impressions are described by Hawker in his well known lines:

"How sadly cohoing to the stranger's tread These walls respond, like voluce from the dead; And sadder traces—darker scenes are three, Takes of the ton b and records of despair. In dealt's ohill grasp, too constous arms unfold. The faits but has of their cherished gold. Here wasted relice, as in mockery dwell There filthful hear to have mouldered side by side.

And hands are clasped that dash could not divide."

History informs us that the city of Pompeii was founded by the Phosnicians long before the Christian Era. It is spoken of by Diodorus Strabe, Senses, and Plutarch. Sensea in his time called it "a colebrated city." From its founder t passed to the Oscans, then to the Etruscans ses to the Saranites, and lastly to the Romans. At the time of its destruction it was a Roman colony.

The ancient walls of the city discovered already, are about two miles in length. They ero of the most substantial kind, having a double parapet which gives them great solidity and strength. The outer wall is 25 feet high, and the inner from 30 to 40 ft., varying according to the inequalities of the ground. The width between the two is some 14 ft, sufficient to allow three war chariots to pass abreast. In these two miles of wall there are at distances the same as in tho walls of Rome, 12 square towers several stories high. These towers not only gave great strengt! to the walls in time of war, but would snawer as observatories to watch the approach of armies who were ensures. The masonry is rude but substantial. Is consists of large blocks of lava rocks in horizontal courses, in the Pelasgic atyle of military architecture.

Enough of the city has been excavated to show its public and many of its private buildings-to datermine the number, direction, and even names have brought the whole force of Black river logs of the atreets so that maps have been made of it to a million and a half dollars! The average names of the owners and occupants of the buildloge, with their occupations, were pointed out to me. They varied vary little from the custom, in this respect, at the present day in many parts of Europe. In Naplee the barbers have a queer Fire Company forthwith, and purchase an es sign,it is that of a human arm painted on the side of the shop with 3 or 4 streams of blood impin. from different parts of it, which go up and fall in treaty, we understand, for the eagine of Comin a fine curve. This would be more appropriat for the bankers to have on their doors, for a more unacrupulous set of cut-throats I have neve found than those who have monopolized the business of exchanges in Italy. In Pompeli one pictured flogging a boy. Urchine would comprehend this, probably, quicker than adults.

But the space of a letter will not permit m to go into particulars. I can merely allode to mer, dislocating his shoulder, and otherwise in this city of the dead. The buildings themselves and deserted streets, as one wanders through them, tell their own history-full as much as and more than the burnt district of New York. after the great fire of 1835. The contents of the mildings have mostly been removed to Naples to save them from the contingences of another rooms filled with rolics of all descriptions taken from the ruins, and a visit to one is incomplete without seeing the other.

In speaking of this collection as illustrating the babits and character of this people, the learned Dr. John Bell aptly says ;- "This Mu in the world. For here we find the furniture, the oreaments, the gods, the statues, the busts the utensile, the paintings of a great people, whose city was overthrown and buried under thick ashes almost 2000 years ago; their books, their equical instruments, even their bread and baked action of the fire, see to be seen. In contain. picting there we trece with a sort of fazination them; and we dwell on the varied objects pre- rants have appeared there as yet.

very beautiful, with sensations so Brely, so real, that we feel as If the people still lived-still were nong us."

Of the public buildings exhaused there are several theatres, an amphitheatre, a forum, sevwhich was not completed until after the destruc-Colineum. There are 40 flights of stairs commitnicating with as many outrances from the streets, that in case of accident the buildings could and the gladiators, and the removal of the dead heatre would accommodate 15,000 persons. blost of the marble seats are still perfect. Professor Dauchar. Messrs. Editors :- Having had the pleasu witnessing the performance of Prof, Douchar upils on Friday last, in Treat's Hall, and havlue to Mr. Deuchar's professional talent to state that I have never before witnessed a similar exibition, giving more general pleasure to parente and visitors. The Hall was graced by a large assemblage of the youth and beauty of our city, who mingled in the mercy dance, after the dancng exercises of the pupils were gone through-The manner in which the pupils acquitted themselves in all the popular dances of the day, and in the various other evolutions calculated to add o grace, convinces mo that Mr. Deuchar pomenaa all the elements essential to make him a perect master of his art. The performance of these hildren has convinced me that there is a science of motion which delights the heart, as well as the science of music or poetry. Discordant sounds and unskillful measures can never give pleasure persons of taste and education; neither can gility of limb, unaccompanied by the "poetry f motion."

The object of dancing is to move with ease. grace and dignity. That Mr. Denobur's pupils have attained this object, was fully attested by heir wonderful performance on the above occasion. Nothing but a peculiar system, founded has had the experience, what a shock it gives to upon the true science of anntomical movement could have enabled the Professor to impart to his pupils instructions which proved so efficient. person may dence with much dexterity, and t the same time be very deficient in many elements essential to a teacher of dancing.
